TEXAS A & M UNIVERSITY

Position Announcement – Associate Director for Engineering Career Services

Do you want to contribute to the success of the next generation of engineers? The Texas A&M University Career Center is seeking to fill the extremely important position of Associate Director for Engineering Career Services. Leading the Center's efforts to provide services to the University's largest college with more than 14,000 students and 13 academic departments offering 17 degrees, this position is vital in providing Texas A&M's engineering students with the career coaching, employment connections, and practical experience that are essential to their success.

Nationally ranked in the top tier of universities for our leadership in education and research, Texas A&M University and the College of Engineering are a preferred source of talent for employers with 1,700 organizations that recruit engineering students. The Texas A&M Career Center is one of the leading career centers in the nation. We have earned this reputation for excellence by meeting the needs of our large and academically diverse student body through numerous campus and corporate partnerships.

Key aspects of the position are strengthening and expanding employer partnerships; enhancing collaborative relationships with administrators and department heads, faculty, academic advisors, and student organizations; providing degree-specific programming; and engaging students in the utilization of Career Center services.

Candidates must have a minimum of a bachelor's degree in a STEM discipline, preferably in engineering. Industry experience strongly preferred. Seven years of progressively responsible management experience required.

For further information, please contact Dr. Leigh Turner, Executive Director of the Career Center, by email at jlturner@tamu.edu or by phone at 979-845-5139 or 979-450-2580.
